Our City comment & discussion

Pasadena Schools' New Plan of Rating Students Should Be Closely Watched

A RADICAL departure from the method which has been in vogue for many years in rating students in our schools has been made by the Pasadena schools.

Heretofore Pasadena has followed the rule used throughout the land of rating students according to proficiency in their studies. Nothing has been considered but book knowledge.

Pasadena has now adopted a system by which a student is rated on a vocational diagnosis.

Very few business men in employing young men or women inquire into what marks they received in school. They are much interested, however, in knowing if the applicant is honest and has energy, enthusiasm and initiative. A person with these qualifications can reach any height, even if in school his marks were not all A's or 1's.

A YOUNG man or woman may have all the qualifications needed for success in life and yet according to the adopted standards now used in marking, fall far short of an honor student.

With the new system of marking to be used in the Pasadena schools, the student who participates in the school activities with the proper amount of enthusiasm will receive a mark of merit while the one who holds aloof from them will be given a lower rating. The pupil who accepts the responsibility of accomplishing difficult tasks will be rated higher than the individual who is pessimistic and afraid to tackle a proposition because it is liable to prove difficult to accomplish.

* * *

IT would be well for other school systems to study over this Pasadena plan and if it is found practicable, to follow its lead. The work is of tremendous importance, for without doubt some credit should be given students who have qualifications fitting them for future success in life but not fitting in with the present code.

A system which will bring out an accurate picture of a student having personality, quickness of thought, respect for authority, confidence, initiative and aggressiveness will not only help the student but be of immense value to the business world.

* * *

IT will be of encouragement to the upstanding, enthusiastic, faithful, democratic and generous student who while well versed in these qualifications has not the mind to assimilate book learning in such a way as to be able to earn a high rating.

* * *

THE conference of governors which has been called by President Coolidge will be held this coming Saturday at the White House.

According to announcement made by the president, the purpose of the meeting is to consider more effective means of co-operation between the national and state governments in the enforcement of not only the prohibition act, but also the narcotic, immigration and kindred laws.

President Harding took the stand that each state should work out its own problems and President Coolidge has so far acted along the same line.

* * *

IN the coal trouble in Pennsylvania the president let Governor Pinchot work out the problem, which he did to the satisfaction of the entire country. In the prohibition act enforcement Governor Pinchot is credited with making the statement that the president should take the lead. As far as co-operating with the different states is concerned we are of the same opinion. The liquor problem can never be met until each state has assumed the obligation of enforcing obedience to the prohibition act as well as other laws of the land.

* * *

GOVERNOR PINCHOT should not try to shirk his responsibility by endeavoring to have the president carry the burden.

WRONG KIND OF FAME FOR HOYT

[By Associated Press]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—When Waite Hoyt, youthful pitching star for the world champion New York Yankees, was halted before city Magistrate Oberwager today charged with a minor infraction of motor traffic rules, the magistrate said:

"Are you trying to become more famous, Mr. Hoyt?"

"This kind of fame is no good," was the reply. "And it won't happen again."

AFTERMATH OF FOREST FIRES IN, NEAR, GLENDALE

But Two Lives Lost, No Large Residences Destroyed

The toll of lives claimed by Saturday's forest fire in the San Rafael hills, according to present indications, will be confined to two volunteers, Clarence Edwards of 369 West California avenue and Joseph McGahan of Sycamore canyon, who are being honored because they gave their lives in service to Glendale.

The devastated fire area was searched carefully yesterday afternoon by a party on horseback from the Glendale police department, consisting of Detective W. J. Royle, Sergeant J. D. Cole and Motorcycle Officers M. H. Collins and A. D. Armer. They were accompanied by J. L. Thorpe, proprietor of the Oakmont riding stables near Montrose, who had stated that he had observed the bodies of three additional victims. They could not be located and the party returned, convinced that the rumor was false.

A report that W. E. Magee of Tujunga had crawled out of the fire-swept region yesterday afternoon half dead from exhaustion and burns and after having remained unconscious for twenty-four hours and was at a Glendale hospital, was grossly exaggerated. He suffered severe burns but is getting along very nicely at the Tujunga hospital, from which he will be discharged in a few days.

Other reports that are found to be without foundation include one that an unknown man barely escaped from a bear-trap with his life and another one that three employes of the Southern California Edison company are still missing.

Despite many rumors to the contrary, not one single residence except a small shack was burned. The property loss was very small, but the denuding of the watershed will have serious consequences for years to come.

Funeral services for Joseph McGahan were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Cypress avenue Christian church, Los Angeles, in charge of the Eastgate lodge of Masons. Interment was in Forest Lawn.

Glendale Masons and Legionnaires will join a large number of his friends in the Congregational church at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the funeral srevices for Clarence Edwards of 369 West California avenue, who gave his life for Glendale.

Rev. C. M. Calderwood, historian of the local post of the Legion, will officiate. Rev. B. Dudley Snudden, pastor of the First Methodist church of Pasadena, will preach the sermon of the occasion.

Unity lodge of Masons has been asked to meet at the Masonic temple tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 in order to go from there in a body to the services.

A special meeting of post 127 has been called by Don H. Packer of 249 South Brand boulevard, acting commander, for tonight. Many of the Legionnaires feel the loss of Comrade Edwards as keenly as though he had been a brother.

Business Building at Central and Stocker

Nathan Rigdon has commenced the erection of a business building on the southeast corner of Stocker and Central, to cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $35,000. It will be 100 feet square and two stories in height, with apartments above. The business rooms will face on Central. This notable improvement will undoubtedly enhance the value of adjoining lots. Nearly two years ago another builder planned a similar structure for this corner, but the project fell through, for some reason.

ARCHITECT TO SUBMIT PLANS FOR NEW HOTEL

Plans for the new hotel to be located at the corner of California and Brand will be submitted by Architect Alfred Priest to the Glendale Hotel company at the office of J. A. Endicott, 116 South Brand at 7:30 o'clock tonight. These are the first detailed plans of the proposed building submitted by Mr. Priest, and the offering of them will mark a big step in the work necessary before the construction of this building can start. Other business of interest to the company will probably be transacted at this meeting.

"DOC." POLLOCK BRINGS BACK A 3-POINT BUCK

Dr. S. Pollock of 419 West Park street, who has been a resident of Glendale for thirty years, drove into his yard yesterday with his chest thrown out and a twinkle in his eye, for on the running board was a three-point buck and fifteen jack rabbits which had fallen before the devasting barrels of "Doc" and his two companions, John Vollmer and Barney Fenton, both of Los Angeles. The scene of the battle was at the foot of Mt. Gleason, near Acton, about sixty miles north of here.

"Doc" admits killing the deer and fourteen of the jack rabbits. He says the rabbits were longer-winded than the deer; that he only shot one of them and ran the other thirteen down.

They were three days out and never pulled a cork.

ELKS' LODGE 1289 OBSERVES 11TH ANNIVERSARY

Nearly 600 Attend, Fifty of Them From Fillmore

Glendale Lodge B. P. O. E., 1289 last night observed the eleventh anniversary of the presentation of its charter with an appropriate program.

The speech of the evening was made by Judge Rex C. Goodcell of Los Angeles, collector of internal revenue. He discussed patriotism from a practical standpoint emphasizing his opinion that real patriotism is best expressed in obedience to law and order.

The Elks band played a number of selections under the leadership of William Osterman of Sawtelle. Following the presentation to the lodge of trophies won by the band at the state convention at Eureka, C. Morris Burke of 616 East Lomita avenue, manager of the band, presented in behalf of its members a platinum ring bearing a small gold harp as a token of their appreciation of his temporary leadership. James A. Apffel of 347 N. Maryland avenue, exalted ruler, thanked the band for the honor brought by it upon the local lodge.

About 600 Elks attended the ceremonies. Among them were fifty from Fillmore, including many who formerly attended the sessions of the Glendale lodge regularly. The response of the occasion was made by C. W. Hawthorn of Fillmore, life member of lodge 1289.

Early vicissitudes of the local lodge were related in a short talk by Peter L. Ferry of 614 East Acacia avenue, its first exalted ruler.

Los Angeles lodge No. 99, which fostered the Glendale lodge, was represented by its secretary, Francis Edgar White.

The program closed with a professional vaudeville show, lasting about an hour, and the serving of refreshments.

Seizures of Smuggled Goods Break Record

[By Associated Press]

MANILA, Sept. 12.—Seizures of goods, especially of illicit opium shipments, smuggled into the Philippine Islands during the second quarter of 1923 increased enormously over previous records, according to a report just issued by the customs secret service.

During the quarter the secret service seized 193 kilos and 669 grams of opium in the port of Manila alone. The value of the goods was place dat $67,500. During the same period last year only one gram of opium was seized.

Convictions resulting from the seizures during the record quarter netted $1,970.50. Sentences amounted to more than 26 years.

More than 400 cities and towns in the state have sent representatives.

OKLAHOMA CITY DESOLATED BY MIGHTY FLOOD

Continued Rains for Four Days Send Rivers on Rampage

[By Associated Press]

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 16.—A catastrophic flood gripped Oklahoma City today.

With virtually the entire south side inundated, flood waters of the North Canadian river rising rapidly and creeping relentlessly upward from the lowlands already literally are lapping at the very threshhold of the retail business center of the city with every prospect that the crest of high water will not be reached for some time.

Sweeping savagely southward, the raging torrent, swollen to unprecedented proportions by rains which have fallen virtually without interruption for four days in the west and north sections of the state, broke through the municipal reservoir, ten miles west of here, early today and flung a pent-up nine-foot wall of water downstream to spread further disaster to the already stricken lowlands of Oklahoma City's south side.

This volume of water reached here about 4 o'clock this morning.

Within an hour it had spread to within 18 blocks of the principal business section, both from the south and southwest corners.

So far there has been no loss of life reported, but numbers of persons are believed to be imperiled.

A swirling current with a powerful undertow defeated efforts of firemen to reach fifteen persons marooned in the Mulligan Grove district in the lowlands. Rowboats were unable to breast the current and effect a rescue, after earlier efforts had resulted in the rescue of several persons.

One man is said to be hanging desperately to a rafter in a church, while the angry waters sweep through the structure below him. A family of 12, five of them small children, also is marooned in a house in the Grove district, it was reported.

In a small grocery store a man and his wife were isolated, awaiting the rescuers who so far have been unable to reach them.

Boatmen succeeded in carrying several persons to safety before the swiftly rising waters isolated the Mulligan Grove neighborhood. Repeated efforts to reach the helpless flood victims will be made, but firemen who battled the current there said it was impossible to navigate in rowboats.

Ordered to places of safety last evening by city authorities, approximately 15,000 residents abandoned their homes in an area in the flood's path comprising 117 city blocks and are being sheltered and fed by hastily formed relief organizations.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 16.—In the middle of the day the flood was still roaring throughout the city, a rushing, swirling torrent two miles wide with many currents ripping new courses through the devastated lowlands.

Efforts were being continued after hours of futile trial to reach several families marooned in their homes, whose cries for help came faintly over the rush of the water and the crashing of trees and buildings that fell before the mighty sweep of the flood.

The first definite report of loss of life in the flood here today was received when police rescued R. H. Loose and his daughter Bessie, 10, from a tree top in Wheeler park and learned from them that a boat in which they had attempted to escape had been capsized, drowning Mrs. Loose and a daughter Clara, 8 years old.

Nineteen persons are in hospitals suffering from exposure, one of whom is not expected to live.

The river here was falling at 2 p. m., and all danger to the business district had apparently passed. The water got no closer than three blocks from the main business center. Backflow from the sewage mains, however, flooded virtually every basement in the district.

RYANS SELL THEIR HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ryan have sold their home at 332 West Acacia to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stephenson of Fort Dodge, newcomers who have come to Glendale to make their home. The Ryans will give possession November 1st and will build a new home on Highland avenue near Kenneth road, where they bought property some time ago.

WORK ON ELECTRIC LINE HAS STARTED

Expect New Glendale Avenue System to Open January 1

The Union Pacific Railway company has finished the digging of the holes for the poles for the electrification of the Glendale avenue line, according to a statement made this morning by P. L. Hatch, general manager of the Glendale-Montrose company. The actual work of placing the poles will begin early next week, says Mr. Hatch, and this will constitute the initial work in the construction of this line.

Immediately after the poles are set the stretching of the wires will take place. When the wires are in place the work of replacing the ties and rails will come next. This work will go forward as rapidly as possible. Unless some unforeseen obstacle arises the Glendale avenue line will absolutely be in operation by January 1, stated Mr. Hatch this morning.

In company with other officials, Mr. Hatch made a tour of the line to be improved this morning, a motor repair car being used. On this tour the exact location of the waiting stations were decided upon. These will be made of crushed rock and each station will have 5-light electroliers. Everything in connection with the line will be as modern as possible, especial consideration being given to the comfort of the patrons of the line.

CALIFORNIA BOYS SUSPECTED OF UTAH MURDER

[By Associated Press]

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 16.—Police are investigating a report that automobile bandits last Saturday shot and killed a man on the highway near St. Thomas, Utah. Police expressed the belief that should the report prove true he may have been slain by the three youths under arrest at San Bernardino for the murder of Officer D. H. Crowther of Salt Lake City.

Crowther disappeared last Friday. On Sunday his body was found but his automobile was missing.

The youths under arrest are Fred Dupont, 20; Robert Saunders, 20; and George Williams, 19.

Acting Governer Crockett has called upon Governor Richardson of California for permission to bring the three youths back here to stand trail.

It was the announced plan of the police to return with the youthful murder suspects in the automobile for the possession of which they are alleged to have killed Crowther.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Oct. 16.—Robert F. Sanders, 20, one of the three youths arrested yesterday at Ludlow on the Mohave Desert while travelling in the car of Police Officer D. H. Crowther, found shot through the head Sunday by the Jordan river, Utah, today confessed that he murdered the policeman after the latter had befriended him, according to a statement by the sheriff's office.

Crowther's body was found on the banks of the Jordan river last Sunday at noon, a bullet fired from behind having entered his head, killing him instantly.

He was 45 years old, had been a member of the police department for 15 years and he is survived by a widow and three children.

Officer Crowther was on duty in the vicinity of the Jordan river when he was killed. That district is the rendezvous of itinerant men and he had been detailed to round them up.

SAMOANS APPEAL TO PRESIDENT FOR TRIAL BY JURY

[By Associated Press]

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa, Oct. 2.—An appeal to President Coolidge is en route to Washington that no more accused men be hanged without a trial by jury be permitted in American ruled Samoa, according to B. F. Kneubuhl, who acted as attorney for Toeupu, a native who was recently hanged here.

Mr. Kneubuhl says that Toeupu should not have been hanged; that he was tried without a jury; that the judges were prejudiced and that Governor Edwin Pollock, U. S. N., admitted to him before the execution that the evidence in the trial was unreliable.

In his letter, Mr. Kneubuhl appeals to the president to prevent by law in American Samoa the possibility of a man being executed without a review of the proceedings being had at Washington.

TREES FIX CORFU LAND PRICES

[By Associated Press]

CORFU, Sept. 12.—Land here is not always sold by the acre. When land is sold the number of trees are counted and the price fixed on the productive power of the trees. This island is rich in olive trees and vines. Wherever there is an olive tree, a price is set on its value and that value determines the value of the land. The Near East Relief workers here recently wished to lease a plot of land for their school near the Kaiser's villa. Before being able to accomplish it, they had to see 65 persons, each one of whom owned a tree on the plot. The work of the Near East Relief not interfering with the growth of olives, made it easy to obtain the lease. Here a man's wealth is in trees.

FIREMEN, POLICE, MANY CITIZENS DO HEROIC WORK

Big Conflagration Brings Out the Best in Men

The fire and police departments of Glendale are entitled to especial commendation for their willing and effective work in the fighting of the disastrous fire that occurred in Glendale Saturday and Sunday, according to Councilman W. A. Horn, who also took an active part in combating the flames.

"I feel that I cannot let this opportunity pass without commending the members of the Glendale police and fire departments for the excellent work done during the fire. Every member of these departments who could be spared for the work were always on the fire lines and every member did effective work. They did not stop until the flames were under control, at which time many of them were so nearly all in that they could hardly walk. They are a wonderful lot of boys and the way they worked was a marvel.

"The boys who were detailed on the street were compelled to do three men's work and every man rose to the emergency in grand style. I cannot speak too highly of the work done by the members of these two departments."

Following are the members of the Glendale fire department:

Chief A. H. Lankford, Captain Ed Fairfield, Captain R. E. Dodsworth, Al Moniot, master mechanic, Captain Gorge Meyer, Captain Jesse Wilkes, Captain John Meyer, Captain J. W. Gould, Albert Psenner, George Blix, Samuel Rich, H. L. Chrisman, Thomas Philp, Arthur Schuster, Chas. Psenner, Ralph Plotkin, William Siemson, Arthur Eyraud, Alfred Siemson, Kennith Grogan, Frank Wilson, Lester Johnson, M. J. Martinell.

Following are the members of the police department:

Chief John D. Fraser, Captain W. A. Loving, Lieutenant W. J. Royle, Lieutenant L. Mann, Detective Sergeant J. Blake, Sergeant J. D. Cole, Patrol Sergeants A. J. Kerns, J. D. Simmons, G. H. Lauritzen; Desk Sergeants H. A. Stafford, E. V. Brown, W. W. Simmons; Motor Officers L. H. Collins, Ralph Baugh, C. Henninger, B. R. Armer; Patrolmen S. C. Hamilton, McLean, McGuire, Epps, Claxton, Schilling, Hedrick, Abbott, La Rock, Wurtz, Young, Kenyon and Henderson.

GROWER APPLIES BURBANK PLAN TO WATERMELON

[By Associated Press]

DENTON, Tex., Oct. 16.—The boll weevil, foe of the cotton raiser and considered one of the biggest pests of the cotton districts, is responsible for a variety of watermelon which promises to make the dreams of the most ardent melon epicure come true.

Watermelons weighing more than 100 pounds may be common on the market in a few years. One tipping the scales at 123 pounds was raised this year by John P. Carter of Garza, Denton county.

He says the boll weevil refused to let him raise cotton and he turned to watermelons. In 1916 he effected a cross of three well known varieties—the Triumph, the Mountain Sweet, and the Tom Watson. Size came from the Triumph, flavor and thin rind from the Mountain Sweet, and firmness of texture, toughness of rind, and also flavor from the Tom Watson. It was not until 1919, however, that Carter began to realize what he had succeeded in doing. That year his largest melon weighed 78 pounds; in 1920 the prize of the patch tipped the scales at 87 pounds. He then began a selection of seed for size and in 1921 obtained a melon 93 pounds and an entire crop average of more than 50 pounds each. It was last year that he topped the 100 pound mark with a melon weighing 102.

From one acre in 1922 Carter realized more than $300. From four and a half acres this year Carter marketed about $1,300 worth of melons, all at wholesale.

LEGION DANCE CANCELLED

Prohibition Law to Be Rigidly Enforced

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Plans to carry the fight for a more rigid enforcement of the prohibition daw into every city, town and village in the country were approved at the closing session here of the citizenship conference.

They anticipate a nation-wide campaign designed to increase respect for the 18th amendment, coupled with a united community campaign in each community to support aggressively the local, state and federal authorities.

Meantime the results of the conference will be available to the conference of governors which will meet here Saturday at the call of President Coolidge to consider more effective means of co-operation between the national and state governments in the enforcement not only of the prohibition act, but the narcotic, immigration and kindred laws.

President Coolidge expressed interest in the purposes of the citizenship gathering and personally attended one of the sessions.

NEW HIGH INSPECTED BY CABINET

Good Sized Room Is Set Aside For Cabinet Meetings

MR. MOYSE IS HOST

Cooperative Book Store Will Be Managed By Students

Last Thursday afternoon the members of the high school cabinet were very pleasantly surprised when they received an invitation from Mr. Moyse and Mr. Ferguson to drop their weighty problems of the day and journey over to the new school to get a "pre-view" on the big buildings before the morning is begun.

The trip was conducted by Mr. Moyse, who gave a great deal of information on the inspection tour, regarding what each room was to be used for, and plans of new projects to be taken up after the change is made.

Each member of the cabinet was especially interested in the room or rooms pertaining to their particular branch of activity. Glenn Roberts was exceedingly interested in the new auditorium and its possibilities as regards seating and stage equipment. Paul Cunningham could hardly wait until the tour reached the library. He was especially pleased when he was shown a room adjoining the library which is to be set aside for the use of debators.

The girls were greatly interested in the sewing and cooking rooms, and held up the procession when these rooms were reached. Arden Gingery was overjoyed when he saw the tower which is built above the center building. "What a wonderful place to sit and think!" was his thought. After he had climbed up to the top he was more enthusiastic than ever.

Mr. Moyse pleased the cabinet greatly when he lead them to a good sized room and made the announcement that it was to be a cabinet room with individual desks for each member. He also showed them a room built with counters which will be a co-operative book store to be run by the student body. This store will be able to sell all tablets, papers, pencils, and school supplies which are needed at very reasonable prices. Mr. Moyse stated that other large school have book stores and that the idea is working out well in all cases.

There is one large room in the second story of the practical arts building which has not been definitely set aside for any one thing as yet. There has been some thought of putting in a small stage and using it for public speaking and debating, also to use it for entertainments and class parties.

Mr. Moyse stated that by the present outlook, it seems as if the school will be finished a little before Christmas vacation, but that the change will probably not be made until after the holidays because all the vacation time could be used in moving fixtures and necessary articles from the old school. The change will be something for everyone to look forward to during the holidays. It may be thought of as a Christmas present.

NEWTON GIVES BOYS CHANCE TO WIN PRESENTS

An unusual opportunity for the boys of Glendale to win their own Christmas presents is afforded in the contest announced by the J. A. Newton Electric company, which also gives them an opportunity to learn salesmanship. The contest is open to boys from 12 years to 19 years of age, and each one will be assigned a territory, so as to avoid confusion. In addition to a liberal commission on sales of electric lamps, there are to be special prizes awarded at the end of the contest. These include a radio set, bicycle, flashlight, and other prizes. The contest ends on December 15. Additional information may be secured at the J. A. Newton Electric company at 154 South Brand boulevard.

WEIGHT LIMITS ARE NOT ALWAYS CORRECT

Many operators of motor trucks apparently misunderstand the provisions of the new motor vehicle law relating to the subject of weight limitations. This is due to what is referred to as the "exemption clause" in the new law and its improper interpretation.

The new law stipulates that the gross weight of a four-wheel vehicle must not exceed 22,000 pounds if operated in any political subdivision of the state that has not by ordinance permitted a higher weight. The "exemption clause" provides that a vehicle which unladen weighs 10,000 pounds or more in use at the time the section of the act regulating weights became effective, which was September 1, may have a maximum gross weight of 24,000 pounrs until January 1, 1927.

The law further stipulates that vehicles entitled to the "exemption clause" must have painted on both sides and rear, in letters not less than three inches high, the words and numerals, "Capacity 24,000 pounds."

It does not seem to be thoroughly understood that those four-wheel vehicles which are permitted a gross maximum weight of 24,000 pounds must weigh when unladen 10,000 pounds or more. There are many trucks in use on the highways whose unladen weight is less than 10,000 pounds, but their owners have had the 24,000 pound phrase painted on them. These trucks are not entitled to this weight and their owners probably are violating the law unintentionally if their vehicles when loaded weigh 24,000 pounds.

There is a very evident misunderstanding on the part of some law enforcement authorities also. Truck operators whose empty vehicles weigh less than 10,000 pounds are reported to have been told by police officers that their trucks must have painted on the sides and rear. 'Capacity 22,000 pounds.' This is incorrect and likely to lead to a great deal of confusion. Under the law the only trucks which have to show a weight designation are those which when empty weigh 10,000 pounds or more.

American Prosperity Today Depends on Individual Thrift

By S. W. STRAUS,
President American Society for Thrift.

CONTACT with conditions in Europe emphasizes above everything else the stabilizing value of thrift to a nation.

S. W. STRAUS

In America, happily, we are not confronted by many of the problems that are demanding solution across the sea.

Ultimate national progress must depend on the wholesome economic status of the individual citizens. In this fact lies the priceless value of thrift to the nation because thrift results in personal economic improvement and thus fosters a contented and happy citizenship.

Our schools, churches, banks and all other institutions which are today seeking the development of more intensive thrift practices in the United States are going straight to the heart of humanity's gravest problem.

Each individual who adopts a routine of systematic thrift becomes an added unit of defense against the encroachment of those fanatical systems which have for their object the overthrowing of the present established order of civilized progress.

Practice thrift, preach thrift, teach thrift and you will be doing more than would otherwise be possible to safeguard the future stability of our nation.

No fair minded man can be pessimistic over conditions and tendencies in this country, yet the fact remains that, with so many disturbing factors abroad we should with all the greater diligence see that the foundations of our country are secure. This means more savings bank depositors, more home-owners, more intelligent investors, more school children in the school savings banks, more building and loan association members, more teachers, preachers, newspapers and magazines developing an intensive and practical appreciation of thrift.

The stability of our present social system is based on individual thrift. We need have no fear of Bolshevism, communism or any other kindred destructive system if we keep this fact well in mind at all times and apply it persistently.

RED CROSS ON THE JOB

The Misses Erma Grant and Bessie Sweetser waiting to greet the American Legion men gathering for their national convention in San Francisco, October 15-19.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 15.—Mobilization of California's war heroes—this time to attend the national convention of American Legion here, Oct. 15-19—has begun.

Not a train comes into San Francisco but bears its delegation of Legionnaires from various parts of California. Of the 150,000 visitors expected here during the big conclave, at least 60,000 will be Californians. They will come by auto, train and boat.

First detachments are arriving to attend the 91st Wild West divisional reunion Saturday and Sunday. The steamer Yale will leave Los Angeles Friday night with 155 former Wild Westerners who will descend on San Francisco the following morning. A banquet seating 4,000 is on the reunion schedule for Saturday night, while a public reception and get-togethers of the 24 regimental units of the famous division will be held Sunday.

Then on Monday will open the Legion convention proper, which will be paralleled by the "40 and 8" and American Legion auxiliary conclaves and by 50 or more divisional, battalion and regimental reunions in which Californians will meet their former "buddies."

California auto caravans will be on the way before the end of the week. Parking space for 500 machines has been provided at Fort Mason, with bake ovens and other open-air equipment.

Men of various walks of life will join the Pacific fleet and Legionnaires in making merry. Luther Burbank will leave his plants and flowers on his experimental farm near Santa Rosa to be a distinguished guest of the convention. Athletes, some of the best in the state, will take part in he Legion sports program. Fliers from San Diego will reinforce those at Crissy Field, as well as others from the navy and marines, in making "air days," Oct. 17, a success.

Among the Californians who will take part in the sports events are William Johnston and the Kinsey brothers, tennis; Charlie Hunter and H. Lindner, track; "Brick" Muller and other old University of California stars, football against a fleet team; Jimmy Britt and Willie Ritchie, boxing at High Jinks stunt night, Tuesday.

Sight-seeing tours to show the city's visitors the wonders of the state will be held daily. Five thousand automobiles are being volunteered for this service. The tours will include Fort McDowell, Presidio, Palo Alto and peninsula points, and trans-bay cities. Thursday, October 18, will be Alameda Day when Oakland, Berkeley and other Alameda county places will have charge of the entertainment.

California is putting its best foot forward in its plans for the convention. Maps of the state will be distributed at information booths, and it is believed thousands of the visiting veterans will choose California as a permanent residence place when they learn of the advantages the state has to offer.

Curing your Golf Troubles

By Jim Barnes

Dear Sir: I find a great deal of trouble in getting down putts of six feet or less. In the course of a round I frequently miss as many as five or six of from two to three feet in length. I am sure I keep my head still and also my body. I take the club back in a straight line and keep my wrists stiff and my arms do the moving. If you can help me out I will appreciate it deeply. H. B. V.

Answer: I think you have probably given the answer to your trouble in the last statement of your case, that is keeping the wrists stiff and making the arms do the moving as you say. More so than any other in golf, the putting stroke is a wrist stroke.

In the first place very little force is required so that the shoulder and body muscles do not need to enter. Also it is a delicate stroke, control being the main factor, both in direction and determining the amount of force to use. Of course the wrists are capable of more accurate action than the more bulky shoulders can be. Hence make them do the work.

Suppose you try the following tips. Keep the left wrist practically straight on these short putts, using it mainly to steady the stroke. Do most of the work with the right hand.

Select a spot at the back of the ball and hit it with the putter just as though you were trying to hit a nail with a hammer. Of course the club must follow through a bit. Do not take the club back too far. Roughly speaking, an inch of backswing will do for a foot of distance to be covered by the ball on these short ones. Continue to keep your head and body perfectly still, and I think you will begin to notice improvement shortly.

(Jim Barnes will suggest a remedy for your golf faults. Write to him, care of the Sport Editor, enclosing stamped envelope, if you want a personal reply.)

CHIEF FRASER TALKS TO BOYS "ON GAMBLING"

Monday evening the Glendale Hi Y club had one of the most interesting and successful meetings it has ever held. Chief Fraser was its speaker, his theme being "Gambling." He defined "gambling" as a "game of chance" and declared that Americans as a nation, love to take a chance. Young people develop the gambling spirit innocently enough when they strive to beat each other in games, when they match coins to see who shall pay for the sodas. It gets into the blood of some boys to such an extent that they cannot stop and not only become professional gamblers but take chances for the sake of heavy stakes when they are in positions of trust and have heavy responsibilities toward others. In other words, they betray their trusts.

"Once a gambler, always a gambler," declared the speaker. "Nobody will trust him and in the long run he usually dies poor." Singing was led by Evert Anderson.

Next week there will be no Monday night meeting of the full club the boys meeting in groups instead. Some will have beach parties, others will go to Alhambra for roller skating, there will be a steak-bake, a wienie roast, a swimming party and a picnic.

Over 150 attended the reception held Monday night by the Glendale Community Players in the palm court of the Tuesday Afternoon clubhouse in honor of Robert Stevenson of Chicago, who is the new art director for the Players. The affair proved to be a very brilliant success and plans were made for the organization of a social section of Glendale Community Players.

Mr. Stevenson was for two years director of the Little theater of Chicago and has studied dancing under the celebrated Bohm and Fokine, in addition to his experience as designer of stage costumes. He gave an informal talk on the possibilities of the work of the Glendale Community Players along the lines of acting, singing and dancing. Many present volunteered their services on the various art and social committees. The committees arranged include the following:

Social secretary, Wm. E. Welz of 1717 Hillcrest avenue, Glen. 2769-W.

Social committee, Mrs. E. B. Moore, Mrs. M. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gaulrapp, Mrs. C. S. Steelman, E. P. Neeley, L. Jones and Mrs. W. Welz.

Director of art section, Robert Stevenson, 211 West Milford street, Glen. 1858-W.

Art departments-poster, Gladys Lamont, Miss Egbert, Mrs. J. Gaulrapp, Eula Linkogel, Miss Haig and Carmen Ritten.

Handicraft, Marian Chapman, Mrs. Nell Few, Lois Whiteman, Patsy Medyette and Muriel Gambrill.

Stage manager, Billy Boyden, with D. Mitchell and E. Grant as assistants.

Stage carpenter, Ed Shockley.

Publicity chairman, A. E. McCoubrey, assisted by Lillian Montgomery and Mildred McCoubrey.

The social section plans to have a social entertainment twice a month, either a dance or whatever the committee plans. This section is open to players and non-players and will provide a delightful means of social enjoyment for men and women, whether old or young. The first social entertainment will be held on Wednesday evening, November 7 and will be in the nature of a Hallowe'en festivity. The men are to provide the cider and apples, while pumpkin pies and cakes are to be provided by the women. Information regarding invitations may be secured by telephoning Glen. 15-W, Glen. 394, or Glen. 1858-W.

An interesting program was enjoyed by those present. This included a group of child impersonations, "The New Brother," and "The Crow's Eggs," by Miss Dorothy Woods; vocal number, "Carmena," by Mrs. Almena Bullock; "Hugarian Idyll" by little Miss Corinne Fittenge, child violinist; songs and dance, "Sweet Alice Blue Gown," by Miss Kathleen Woods; exhibition waltz by Robert Stevenson and Miss Kathleen Woods.

Announcement was made by Mrs. Nanno Woods, director of Glendale Community Players, that "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," would be produced on Friday and Saturday evenings, November 2 and 3, in the auditorium of the Tuesday Afternoon club, with Mrs. Fannie Stockbridge in her Morosco role of "Miss Hazy" and Mrs. L. W. Bradley as "Mrs. Wiggs." On account of the desire of the players to present plays at popular prices, it will be necessary that the auditorium be filled to capacity both nights in order to meet the expense of rental. The prive of admission has been fixed at 35 cents.

As stated at a recent meeting of the Glendale Federation of P.-T. So, it is hoped that the parents will be out to enjoy a social evening with the teachers on Friday.

GOING AFTER TRADE

Merchants of Southern California are censured by some of the more energetic among them, for their neglect of foreign trade. Business men just returned from South America and the Hawaiian Islands are the ones voicing the rebuke. They have seen how golden opportunities are being neglected. Even such shipments as are made from this end of the state are likely to be billed through San Francisco, a circumstance giving foreign customers an incorrect idea of the situation here.

Much caustic comment is made the country over concerning the apathy towards establishing a merchant marine. The United States has the greatest resources to draw upon, and hundreds of available bottoms, which are permitted to rot in the docks; offered for sale at prices ridiculously low, and with no bidders. If merchants lack the initiative to seek patronage abroad, and shipping men decline to avail themselves of facilities, there is little utility in talking about a United States merchant marine, for there is going to be no such concern on any scale worth mentioning.

Manufacturers and producers of southern California would seem to have peculiar advantages, and to be letting them pass. Already more than 60 per cent of the tonnage through the Panama canal originates or is received at the harbor of Los Angeles. In great part these figudes represent coastwise trade. No reason appears why the same route should not be employed in increasing foreign trade.

PUBLIC PARKS

There are some surprising figures given in relation to national parks. Such places were visited during the season of 1923 by almost a million and a half people. This, however, is not surprising. One who had been out on the public highways seeing the thousands of machines bound for one or another of the parks could not but be aware that the total of the visitors would be high.

At a guess the dweller in the west would have said that the largest number of visitors went to the Yellowstone. It had a total of 183,352 visitors. Yosemite was next with 130,046. Following Yosemite came Mount Rainier park, with 123,708, an increase from 70,376 the year before.

It is not singular that Rainier park should have gained, for it is in a region of singular and imposing beauty. The highways that lead to it are utilized somewhere by Yellowstone tourists, and more and more of these leave the regular course for a ride through the Paradise Valley, a place of rare loveliness, leading to Rainier.

The real surprise of all the figures is that Rocky Mountain national park drew more visitors even than the Yellowstone, and yet the reason is plain enough. Some tourists do not cross the continent, being satisfied with a sojourn in the Rockies. Such as do cross take in the Colorado park going or coming.

National parks are great institutions. Yearly they are growing in popularity and usefulness. Not only do they afford healthful diversion, but they are teaching the people of the United States to know their own country.

GOLDEN WORDS

Lloyd George is said to be under contract to write a series of articles for which he will receive 30 shillings, or $6.82 a word. So far as comes to mind this is higher than any price pair. When Peary got $1.20 a word from an American publisher the circumstance was heralded as unique, and regarded as extraordinary.

There are some things beyond price. To set a value upon them would be impossible. They are in the category of the "priceless." If they change ownership it is because of necessity. The sum paid does not represent the worth of the treasure, but the ability of the purchaser to pay. To jump to the conclusion that Lloyd is to be paid too much, would be hasty. Perhaps he has words to set down conveying a message to all the world, and out of that he writes, there is to grow a plan of peace. Should this prove to be the case, then he could not be paid enough. There is no way of measuring the measureless benefaction. It is not to be indicated by the most imposing array of dollar marks.

Lloyd George believes that he has a plan the benefits of which will be for all of civilization. He would unite the mightiest powers, not as an offensive unit, but for the guardianship of the tranquility of the world. If he can set forth such a project convincingly, engage the interests of the nations, urge them successfully to take the course he outlines, then for the message flowing from his pen could not be paid too much, not by all the money of all the publishers in Christendom.

WHEN AUTHORITY IS CORRUPT

The police of any city that expects to be safe and reasonably decent must be free from corruption. The police force is supposed to attend to enforcement of the law. It has the duty of catching the criminal and turning him over to the courts. In a municipality where the police themselves are criminal, when they wantonly overlook criminal acts and even participate in them, the outlook is dark for all save members of the local underworld.

Los Angeles is making a hard fight against crime. Its best citizens have organized to co-operate with the police. The chief of police is an earnest and honest executive. He is endeavoring to bring the men of his command up to a high standard, not only of alertness, but of morals; he hopes to give them vision, to impress upon them the importance and gravity of their mission. When he sees a crook in uniform his impulse is to dismiss him. He knows that the institution he seeks to build up must be free of weak spots. An official body above him has authority to override him. It seems to be taking every opportunity of doing so.

At Long Beach the police force is under a cloud. Some of the police themselves have been arrested for detestible offenses for which no competent and upright policeman would have toleration. Others are suspected. Even the chief has been made the subject of serious charges.

This sort of business won't do. It won't do as to Long Beach or any other city. It is the very thing that must be corrected before a successful campaign against crime may be carried on. Setting a thief to catch a thief may be sound policy under some circumstances, but never in relation to police work.

When there is corruption at the very heart of authority, and the instrumentalities supposed to serve justice are used to promote crime, there is no doubt as to the exact spot where reform must begin.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa has been proclaiming the farmers of that prosperous state all dead broke. The effect of this is that their credit is impaired, and they are pretty mad about it, especially as they are not broke.

A colored youth down south committed a number of highway robberies. When caught he explained that he was seeking the means to educate himself. The passion for learning sometimes carries the earnest student to excess.

The blindness of love enables young people to economize on electricity.

A man's conscience is constantly reminding him of his neighbor's sinfulness.

A BLOW AT TRADITION

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

David George Lloyd has smitten American tradition in the midriff. He refused to talk until his throat became useless and went home and to bed.

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

He cut the sacred handshaking sacrament, snipped off engagements as if they had been barley heads and, declaring that he was "no Roosevelt" took to his room and to rest.

This happened in Montreal and it probably saved the former premier a serious illness. From now on he will make only as many speeches as a flesh and blood man ought to be expected to make and he probably will not shake hands at all.

Had President Harding taken such a course he might still be alive and at the head of the nation. We Americans must either cure ourselves of the hand shaking mania or resign ourselves to seeing our presidents successively killed to gratify the petty vanities of the mob.

Some years ago a popular national idol, in the brief heydey before the fickle public grew cold to him, made a tour of the south. In the metropolis of a southern state he shook hands until the blood dyed his fingers; on another occasion a civil war hero visiting the scenes of his martial activities was so set upon by herds of admirers that his hands had to be supported by friends toward the end of the ordeal. A complete collapse resulted.

The frank and sensible action of England's former premier ought to rivet the attention of Americans on the heartless and cruel strain to which public men are subjected as part of the price they must pay for serving the people. It is not only the lions who must submit to public mauling and exhausting adulation that at best serves no purpose save the purpose of furnishing a boasting point for the personally vain; even the lionettes must endure the grueling experience.

It is said but true that this country is filled with people who long to report to their "circles" that they have shaken hands with distinction, chatted with nobility and possess a library that contains a number of autograph volumns. How those autographs are secured is a story in itself. Last year I attended a lecture by an eminent novelist given in a not too eminent woman's club. The membership turned out en masse and each woman brought a visitor and everybody brought a book by the lecturer. That poor man had no time to do anything after his speech; he simply stood and autographed his own novels; much as the Belgians stood before the Germans on their desired way to Paris.

David Lloyd George has set a sensible precedent; may it introduce a saner attitude toward those in high places.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

We're keenly interested in each other in our town. When Bob Warren lost his job with the Steel corporation we were deeply concerned. We all put it just that way—that he had lost his job. None of us really believed Bob when he said he had quit of his own accord. It did not occur to many of us that a boy would quit a good, safe job with a salary every Saturday night.

"It wouldn't be so bad," mourned Uncle Dave Warren, "if this was the first job he'd lost."

"You be quiet, Father," said Auntie May. "Bob's all right. He's just looking around for something he likes."

Bob had studied medicine for three months in Doc Cary's office. He had read law a little of nights in Attorney McAdoo's place, across from the courthouse. He had been a shipping clerk in a mail order house. He always wore good clothes, smoked cigarettes and kept abreast of the musical shows. Uncle Dave got me to talk to the boy once, but i did not get very far.

"You needn't worry," he said, somewhat disrespectfully. "I'm not going to hold a job I don't like. There are too many jobs to be had. One of these days I'll either find a business I'm interested in or turn hobo."

Bob drove in the other day in a fancy runabout, accompanied by a brand new wife. Long ago he had found the job that interested him. His wife says he cannot keep away from the office long enough to make love, and says it with a pout that shows she means it. Bob says that business is the most wonderful game in the world. He has convinced even Uncle Dave.

"Keeping a grocery has just been work for me," he said, regretfully. "I always wanted to be a doctor. I could have been, too, if I'd had the sense that Bob has. I was in too much of a hurry. I held the first job I ever got because I didn't know any better."

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

CHAPTER IV

JAMES W. FOLEY

There are between five and six thousand school children in the camps of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, which has coal mines all through Los Animas, Huerfano and Gunnison counties in Colorado and in the ore beds of Wyoming. Mr. W. E. Bragg of Pueblo, with whom I am doing my work, is a kind of liaison officer between the company and the schools.

He visits them regularly, observes things desirable, makes regular reports of progress, urges school attendance in the higher grades, provides entertainments and in every possible way helps with the education of the children in the coal and ore camps. He is earnest, sincere, friendly, enthusiastic and a delightful companion.

* * *

After the Morley afternoon the rain abated and we had a splendid audience in the evening, of the adults. Among them were miners, power plant men, electricians, bosses, and all of the types of men and labor a coal mining camp offers. There were women, too, teachers, miners' wives, the elder children of the camp, and in all a kind of audience that makes you want to give of your best.

The attention was close, enthusiasm marked and appreciation sincere. The program lasted about an hour and one old fellow I heard tell a companion afterward: "Short, by gosh, but all the time snappy." And that seemed fair enough to me.

* * *

When the program was over it was dark as pitch outside, except for the glow of high strung electric arcs through the camp. Down at the foot of the gorge the creek roared and splashed, a muddy torrrent. It could be heard a half mile away as it roared along down the mountain gorge.

Trinidad was a number of miles away. The road was slippery and muddy. In one place there was barely the width of a motor between the creek and the mountain side and that was washing out rapidly. Out of regard for our families and our jobs and the people we aid and benefit in the world we decided not to return to Trinidad in the darkness, with the prospect of another torrent of rainfall and a probability of landing in that roaring yellow muddy creek. We had no fear ourselves, I say.

It was solely out of regard for those who like our presence among them. So we found a bed and stayed the night. In the morning we caught an early Santa Fe train and returned to Trinidad in warmth, comfort and safety.

* * *

We enter Trinidad along the banks of the Purgatoire creek or river. It flows directly through the town. It is another rushing, muddy yellow stream in times of heavy rains and southern Colorado has had nothing but torrents of rainfall for the past month and as I write the air is filled with threatening gray clouds. All day yesterday it pelted down in a steady stream.

The Purgatoire or Purgatory, as I told an old-timer when I was first here is a H— of a name for a creek. And it is that kind of a river at that. Pioneer nomenclature some years ago corrupted the name Purgatoire into Picketwire and so the creek is generally known now. And there is a daily paper here, the Trinidad Picketwire, which is the strangest name for a paper I ever heard except perhaps the Paragould Polyphone, down in Florida somewhere.

* * *

The altitude up at Morley is about 7500 feet. I discovered something the matter when I started up to the home of the camp superintendent for supper. It stands on a knoll and is reached by several flights of cement steps after a considerable climb up hill. I stopped half a dozen times on the way up. My lungs would not take in enough of the rarified air to drive my legs along. As it is I have to climb down hill after climbing up to catch the breath I lose going up. A mile and a half in the air is much different from near sea level when it comes to climbing hills. I think even the best hikers in southern California would stop for an occasional breath after nearing the eight thousand foot summit of Raton pass.

Songs of the Poets

My Owen—By Ellen Mary Patrick Downing

Proud of you, fond of you, clinging so near to you,
Light is my heart now I know I am dear to you!
Glad is my voice now, so free it may sing for you
All the wild love that is burning within for you!
Tell me once more, tell it over and over,
The tale of that eve which first saw you my lover.
Now I need never blush
At my heart's hottest gush—
The wife of my Owen her heart my discover!

Proud of you, fond of you, having all right in you,
Quitting all else through my love and delight in you!
Glad is my heart since 'tis beating so nigh to you!
Light is my step for it always may fly to you!
Clasped in your arms where no sorrow can reach me,
Reading your eyes till new love they shall teach to me.
Though wild and weak till now,
By that blest marriage vow,
More than the wisest know your heart shall preach to me.

THE LIFE OF REASON

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WHATEVER one may think of Mr. George Santayana and his philosophy there can hardly be any question that he is one of the first class minds of this generation, and that when he speaks it behooves all of us who respect intelligence to be quiet and listen.

His great work in five volumes, "The Life of Reason," has just reached its second edition after twenty years. Those who pursue the pleasures of thought and admire ideas as others do mountains and shows, will find great entertainment here. It is by no means pap or spoon victuals but good hard food and minds in their milk teeth are not advised to try it.

But I am inclined to think that no one can get a comprehensive and correct idea of the thought of this age without being familiar with Santayana any more than he can hope for such thing without familiarity with the thought of William James, John Dewey and H. G. Wells.

There is one saying of Santayana's that has kept following me for some time, one idea of his book which like a friendly dog has left the pack and for some reason has been at my heels. It is this:

"Nature has come forward, and the life of reason, which then held the center of the stage, has receded."

The "then" refers presumably to twenty years ago. The experience to which he here confesses is common to most of us as well as characteristic of the age we live in.

The business of reasoning is I think carried on as well today as in any period of the past, probably we reason even better now than did the thinkers of former times. But perhaps our rationalizing has improved for the simple reason that we considerably distrust it, while our predecessors had a faith in it that was often fanatical.

So many things that are not true have been so perfectly proved by logic that we cannot be blamed for being a little suspicious of the logic machine.

"Reason," says Bertrand Russell, "has its place in life, but that place is perhaps not paramount. If our reason were divine we could worship it and let it rule us; but it is human and liable to err. To respect it unduly is to retard progress, even intellectual progress."

The workable truth about this matter seems to be that while we should value our reason and not insult it, and while we can hardly retain our self-respect unless we let it have its say and give it respectful attention, at the same time we should always keep it in check and correct it by the instincts.

The instincts may be said to be Nature's reasoning. Unless we consider them duly and keep coming back to them we are liable, if we follow logic blindly, to wander off in the jungle.

The higher reasoning is not mere expertness in the game of logic, which the author of Alice in Wonderland reminds us is but a game and can be played by counters as one plays checkers, but consists in constantly realizing that man is not only a proud spirit but also a humble animal and should take account of his whole nature, of all the facts and laws revealed by science, and of those deep and mysterious forces within him which he is compelled to use although he has never been able fully to understand them.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

HENRY JAMES

At this writing the bandits who tried to rob a train, and in doing so murdered four train men, useful and industrious citizens, are still at large. They are in no sense useful and industrious citizens. They and their type cumber the earth. So far as it is possible for society to do so, they should be exterminated.

In some respects Mexico excels the United States. In the former country the bandits if caught would be executed on the spot. There would be no long interval of detention, followed by trials, the outcome of which would be uncertain; there would be no silly "presumption of innocence" for the protection of the known guilty. No court would be asked to give the assassins probation, and no parole board would extend them the boon of freedom upon request of the prisoners.

Dispatches say that state troops are along to prevent a lynching. If this is the purpose of the troops it is to be hoped they will be absent from the scene at the critical time. It would be a mistake to capture the outlaws; what they need is to be killed, and any posse with good red blood in its veins would take this view of the situation.

Robbers and murderers, according to the accepted American plan, are to be handled with velvet gloves; coddled rather than corrected. And the fruits of the plan may be discerned in the daily record of outrageous crimes.

* * *

Graft is said to be the curse of the Chinese republic. It also is the curse of other governments, from municipal up.

The Chinese are a strange people. Individually they are trustworthy to an extent not marking any other race. The word of a Chinese in a business transaction is as good as any man's bond. A Chinese agreeing to pay a debt at a certain hour would consider himself disgraced and ruined by failure to do so, and in the rare instance of failure, has sought to wipe out the stain by suicide.

The Chinese also, while proverbially peaceful, enduring wrongs that would enrage members of another race beyond control, furnish the world, as pirates and bandits, with the most desperate fighters that ever scuttled a ship.

Perhaps the grafting of officials is an expression of their desire to adopt modern methods.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

JUSTICE

Justice is something that all children crave and few children ever get. Most parents pride themselves on the justice they show their children and never see that they are unjust in their idea of justice.

"I make them all go to bed together. Ralph is the oldest and I think it is too early for him, but it isn't just to the others to make them go and let him sit up." You wouldn't think anybody would talk that way about justice, now would you?

"Belle invited Florrie to spend the summer with her, but I didn't think it was right to let her go and all the others have to stay home." That's a queer idea of justice, isn't it?

"Peter learns his verses just about three times harder than the others. It takes him forever! He says I ought to let him off with one where the others do three, but that wouldn't be just. I make him learn the same number as the rest. That's why he had to stay home today when the others went nutting. But what could I do? One has to be fair."

"What's she crying for? Well, I'll just tell you. I make a point of treating my children just alike, no favors, no pets. You know what I mean. I bought their hats today and I bought them exacty alike and Claire thinks that blue would have been better on her hair than the tan, but those tan hats were the only sort they had two of so I had to get them."

Claire had red hair and the shade of tan against it was awful. But then, "justice" had been done. Both had been treated "equally." And stupidly!

It is not possible to treat any two children in the same way and do them justice because they are not the same children. If the conditions vary how can the same measure fit both cases?

Why if one child is redheaded and another golden, should both be penalized? If one be slow, shall he be overburdened for his pace?

What do we know about justice anyway? Any judgment we make is faulty in the first place, and the last, too! It is impossible to mete out perfect justice to anybody. We would not if we could. Why single out the children for our mistaken efforts?

"Justice is mine," saith the Lord. There is something of warning, something almost of suppressed impatience, in that dictum. Only the power that created and animates us could know the real inwardness of what we are and where we have succeeded and where we have failed; only that power can know when the success should be blamed and the failure praised.

Cease trying to be just and work harder to be kind to children. Their lot is not easy, neither is their burden light.

ANNUAL FAMILY PICNIC AND PARTY OF ELKS, SUNDAY

Many Races and Other Contests Add Zest to Gathering

Despite the warm weather, a good crowd turned out to enjoy the annual family picnic party of the Glendale lodge of Elks held on Sunday at Happiland Park, with more than 700 present. After a picnic lunch at noon there was a ball game staged between the officers of the lodge and the orchestra members, the latter team defeating the officers. A feature of the game was the "heavy" hitting of Exalted Ruler James A. Apffel. (He mentions this himself.)

This was followed by the program of races, contests, etc., a list of which, together with the prize winners, is given below. The crowd then adjourned to the dance pavilion, where music for dancing was furnished by the Glendale Elks own Jazz Orchestra, under the capable leadership of Wm. Bode. Refreshments of ice cream and soft drinks were served to all present. Over forty gallons of ice cream and 155 dozen bottles of soft drinks were consumed. Dancing continued until 6 p.m.

14. Single ladies' race, won by Margurite Brown, first; Susie Smith, second.

15. Free-for-all men's race, first Tom Brown.

FOUR SERVICES AT BROADWAY M. E. SOUTH, SUNDAY

The officials and congregation of the Broadway Methodist church were much pleased at the attendance Sunday at the four services. The children's departments of the Sunday school exceeded all previous records.

At the Epworth League service, led by George F. Newman, were present more than the average number. At this service Mrs. Newman and Miss Pauline Marsh sang a lovely duet.

Both morning and evening sermons were by the pastor, Rev. L. J. Millikan, and were so eloquent and forceful he has been requested to preach them again at some future date. The morning theme was "Preparing for a Conflict", and at night the speaker discussed "The Causes for Peter's Receding". A thirty minute song service preceded the evening sermon, and was led by Will J. Myers, who also sang beautiful solos at both services.

Next Sunday will close the conference year, but the congregation expects Rev. Millikan's return next year.

STANDARD FIRE COUPLINGS WILL SAVE MILLIONS

The practicability of changing non-standard fire hose couplings to conform with the national standard was demonstrated at a recent meeting of the National Fire Waste Council in Washington by Major J. H. Howland, engineer of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, assisted by the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce.

It was shown that the regular fire hose couplings of Syracuse, N. Y., New York City, Baltimore and Washington, no two of which are now interchangeable, could be made completely interchangeable by the simple operation of rethreading with standard threading tools.

The use of different threads on their fire-fighting equipment prevents communities from helping each other in case of serious fire. Thus in the Baltimore fire apparatus brought in from Washington and Philadelphia could not be connected to the Baltimore hydrants. In the San Francisco fire the city's water supply had been cut off by the earthquake. There were warships in the harbor with powerful pumps that might have been of material assistance in fighting the fire but for the fact that their couplings would not fit the city's hose.

In both these cases millions of dollars' worth of property were destroyed that could have been saved had the threads on the fire equipment been standardized, and many towns and cities throughout the country are still exposed to this danger in case a fire ever gets too big for the local appartus to handle. The rethreading tools make it easy and inexpensive in most cases to change the equipment to standard. Existing couplings can be rethreaded at very moderate cost and new equipment of standard dimensions purchased as the old equipment wears out. About a fourth of all the towns in the United States are now using the standard coupling, which was chosen as being the one to which changes could be most easily made.

Just Chatter

By JOHN J. MULLIGAN

It was just a little old church as one sees in the country, a little old church of romance and stained glass with a winding flowered path to its open door. It was small and unpretentious, with that rustic simplicity and sweetness which He loved so well; a church which seemed all heart and soul, and hope and love; in truth—a church.

But anyway I passed it last Saturday night on my homeward way after a trying day of wrangling and dissension; of jealousy, discord and hate, and as I reached its open door I paused and listened, drawn by the sweetly cheering strains of music soft and low, for the organist lingering over his keys was evidently rehearsing for the following day. And as I paused I pondered, for such is the mystic magic of music upon the subconscious mind that it carries one back to other days and other things. And back I went on memory's magic carpet to twilights long ago when mother sang those sweet old songs to me when life was pure and sweet and full of hope and joy and peace.

The minutes passed and still I lingered spellbound by the soulful chords. They say that music has charms to soothe the savage beast and breast, and I guess they're right, but they forgot to add that it also drives away dull pain and sorrow, bringing in its place a ray of light of peace, of hope and joy, and this it surely did for me, for when I finally turned away and left it was happy as a man reborn.

I always try not to be silly or sentimental or anything like that, but you can judge for yourself the magic which that music worked.

I was touched next block for a ten spot and the fellow not only got it, but besides—a smile.

WHAT DID YOU LOSE IN THE FIRE

What did you lose in the fire?

What, you didn't have any fire? Well, you lost anyway. Even if you had a fire and were fully insured, you were a big loser. Why? Because the insurance companies are collecting from you and from all of us enough money in premiums to cover all their "losses" and show them a profit. This is no reflection on the insurance companies. They have to do that or go out of business.

But why should we pay for the other fellow's carelessness? The idea in this question is not to evade the payment of insurance premiums, but to lessen the amount of them by working together for the elimination of carelessness and the use of flimsy building construction. The man who builds with inflammable materials is just as much at fault as the man who carelessly tosses away a burning match, or who uses wood containers for the hot ashes from his stove or furnace. When fire-safe construction such as concrete and other recognized materials costs only 3 to 5 per cent more, the man who deliberately tempts fate with inflammable construction, literally hasn't got a log to stand on.

In the face of these facts, who is more responsible than the builder of inflammable structures, for our staggering annual fire loss of more than 500 million dollars and the toll of 15,000 lives and 17,000 injuries?

CREDIT MEN VOTE DONATION OF $100 TO RELIEF FUND

The Glendale Credit and Professional Men's association voted $100 from its funds at its noon luncheon today to go toward a fund being raised for the relatives of the men who lost their lives in the big fire which swept the hills east of Glendale Saturday. Additional amounts are being subscribed by individual members of the Credit association.

The stores of Glendale will not close as a whole on Armistice day which will be celebrated on Monday, November 12. As the 11th falls on Sunday this year, various affiliated lines of business, however, may decide to close, among which are the hardware stores. However, this arrangement was left to the various lines of business effected.

SCIENCE TELLS WHY MILK SOURS

Housewives often wonder why milk sours on a cool day. To understand this, a few bacteriological facts are necessary. A chemical analysis of milk shows that it consists of 87 per cent water, fats, proteid matters, and certain salts such as lactose, glucose and mannite. When these salts are transformed into lactic acid, the milk sours.

The change of these salts into lactic acid is not directly produced by warmth but by microscopic organisms bearing the scientific name of bacterium acidi-lactici. In a warm temperature they multiply very rapidly. Hence in a bottle of milk exposed to a temperature higher than 50 degrees for even a few hours, the bacterium acidi-lactici increase literally by the thousands. The result is sour milk. This accounts for the souring of milk even on cool days. For in California there are only a few days in the year when the temperature does not go above 50 degrees at least for two or three hours out of the day.

Bacterium acidi-lacticic are not, as many people suppose, animals, but tiny plants. They are harmless, and must not be confused with disease germs. On the other hand, there are certain other putrifactive bacteria, those producing ptomaine for instance, which are decidedly harmful. None, however, can exist in a temperature kept lower than 50 degrees by means of ice.

THOSE THE DEVIL LOVES

Little Elsie had been particularly trying to her mother that day. She really seemed to find delight in teasing to the height of exasperation.

"If you are so naughty, Elsie, no one will love you," said her mother with a frown.

"Yes, mother; I know some one who will love me. The badder I am the more he loves me."

"Why, Elsie, what do you mean?"

"The devil."—Everybody's Magazine.

Stained soft wood floors which shown worn places should be touched up with the same stain and the whole should then be varnished with some first-class floor varnish. The varnish should be renewed at intervals in the places subjected to most wear, but if the floor had been so long neglected that not only the varnish but also the stain is worn through and must be patched, a fresh coat of varnish over the whole floor will do something to hide the junction of the new and old stain and add to its appearance and durability.

AN INDORSEMENT

A lecturer gave a learned and interesting address before a woman's club on "The Decadence of Pure English."

At the close of the talk an overdressed woman approached him and said:

"I did enjoy your talk ever and ever so much, and I agree with you that the English language is decading something awful. Hardly no one talks proper nowadays, and goodness only knows what the next generation will talk like if nothing ain't done about it."—Houston Post.

A woman is always willing to acknowledge a man's superiority when she has a lead pencil to sharpen.

ROBIN HOOD PLAYS FOR LAST TIME WEDNESDAY AT THE GLENDALE THEATRE

That all may have an opportunity to see this great picture, Manager Howe has succeeded in again bringing it to his popular theatre. The last run of this great picture will occur Wednesday night, Oct. 17. One show only. So get your tickets early.

Usually stories laden with statistics are boresome rather than entertaining or instructive. However, in the case of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," a United Artists release at the Glendale theatre, an exception can be noted, due to the unbelievable speed with which this gigantic production was "shot" and to the remarkable organization with which Mr. Fairbanks surrounded himself.

He put at the head of each department the most thoroughly competent man obtainable, regardless of price. And at the head of the whole directorial force he placed Allan Dwan, reputed to be the most thorough and swiftest director of productions of the Robin Hood magnitude in the picture industry. With Mr. Fairbanks' own dynamic energy behind this organization to give it impetus, there was never a dull moment from the time the first camera started to the final fadeout.

Here are the cold figures which tell the story of the making of this feature:

Thirty thousand calls issued through casting department to players.

One thousand and eight hundred players used in biggest scene.

Three hundred horses used in a single scene.

Total scenes shot, 1108.

Maximum number of scenes in a day, thirty (in Sherwood forest).

Minimum number of scenes in a day, two (Banquet hall).

No time was lost on account of rain. The company worked on one holiday—Decoration day—and four Sundays. Only four locations were used despite the magnitude of the picture. While the sets were under construction, a crew of 800 was employed, part of the number working at night to speed the work.

"In the Land of Cotton"

-the Pacific-Southwest

THE cotton district of the Pacific-Southwest includes the Imperial Valley in California and Mexico, Arizona, and some acreage in the San Joaquin Valley. It is estimated that cotton production from this territory will this year exceed 200,000 bales. This is about 25,000 bales over the 1922 crop, which was valued at approximately $20,000,000.00.

The Pacific-Southwest is probably the world's greatest potential cotton producing area. The yield per acre is from twice to four times that of the old cotton belt in the south. Pest cannot assail our crops. Superior man power is available. We have the advantages of cheap transportation through Los Angeles Harbor to the consuming centers of New England, Europe and the Orient.

This Bank is proud of the part it has had in the development of the cotton industry in the Pacific-Southwest.

YANKS CAPTURE WORLD'S SERIES FROM GIANTS

American League Champs Come From Behind and Win Sixth Game

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Beaten, crushed after one of the most spectacular world's series fights in history, the New York Giants yesterday surrendered to the Yankees the world's championship banner they have flown for the past two years. And, tonight with this record-shattering million-dollar title battle at an end, the emblem of supremacy flutters atop of the Yankee stadium, greatest and costliest monument of the diamond.

The Yankees won the sixth and final game yesterday afternoon at the Polo Grounds, lair of the Giants, by coming from behind and scoring five runs in a dramatic, pulse-gripping eight-inning rally, just when it seemed that the McGraw men, fighting desperately with their backs to the wall, would tie the series and force a seventh contest to decide the struggle. The final score was 6 to 4.

Thus the American League champions swept to their third successive triumph, completed the rout of the once proud and mighty Giant machine, and, by the decisive margin of four games to two, gained their first world's title in more than two decades of embattled history.

LEAGUE FOOTBALL SCHEDULE OPENS THIS WEEK

Glendale High Meets So. Pasadena in First Encounter

Friday, October 19, Glendale's Heavyweight Football Team will play the first game of the season, with South Pasadena , on the latter's field. The preceeding day, Thursday, October 18, the lightweight team will play its first game with the same school, on Glendale's field. Both teams are set and ready to begin the skirmish for their respective pennants. Both, also, have considerable chance of success. The coaches believe that a strong support of the student body will greatly multiply Glendale's chances of a victorious football season. In the past this has proven to be the case. Whenever Glendale has captured any pennant, it has been strongly supported by the student body. This year will be no exception to the case.

The other teams of the Central League have ambitions similar to Glendale's. From all reports their ambitions are not ill-founded. Covina is rumored to have an exceptionally strong team. Alhambra in spite of the weak teams which she has produced in the past, is assured that she has a good chance to carry away the 1923 Central League Football Pennant. Monrovia has always had a strong team, and the coaches consider that school to be one of their foremost adversaries. Citrus and South Pasadena, the latter of which Glendale plays Friday, are not heard from as much as other of her opponents, but it is believed that they are planning to spring a surprise.

Spring a surprise. Hence every member is putting forth an extreme effort to vanquish its rivals, and is urgently requesting a strong support from its respective student body.

The members of the heavy and lightweight teams, the coaches, and the office issue a special request that every student of Glendale High School be present at South Pasadena, Friday, when the black and red warriors go upon the field to relieve South Pasadena of the possibility of vanquishing them. The request is asked of the student body Thursday, October 18, when the lightweight team will battle with South Pasadena on the home field.

SILENT SIGNALS ARE DISPLAYED BY POET ELEVEN

Use of Silent signals from a shift formation by the Whittier tanbark squad promises to cause not a little comment this year. Although this system is said to slow up the game somewhat, the Poets expect to trick opponents into submission and have had some success in practice games.

The Quakers are stronger than was at first generally considered this year. They beat Caltech in great style. With several outstanding stars on the squad and a host of capable subs, they expect to upset some of the favorites.

SAGEHENS WORK HARD PREPARING FOR ENGINEERS

Pomona Gridders Getting Ready for Their First Conference Game

CLAREMONT, Oct. 16—The Sagehen camp is the scene of great activity this week in polishing off the rough spots shown up by the Trojans, in preparation for the Pomona-Caltech game. Especial attention is being given to the perfection of interference and defense.

Just at present Nixon has adopted a serious countenance caused chiefly by the failure of his backfield to come up to expectations. However, the individual material is good, as anyone of the quartet composed of Bell, Merritt, Clark and McCully can be counted on for consistent gains, and if they can achieve some semblance of teamwork should give the Engineers something to worry about.

An open date for Saturday was indeed fortunate for the Sagehens as it gave them time to work out some of the rough spots which invariably go with a green team. Scrimmaging and intensive practice will be the order of the day from now on, with Hod Chambers's frosh team furnishing the opposition. Nixon is devoting much time to the perfection of his regular plays, without attempting new ones, and in building up the line for better defensive work—a quality much needed by the Claremonters.

It takes a lot of intellectual steam to operate a train of thought.

SPORT-O-GRAMS

By FRANCIS WILKERSON READ

SOME SERIES

Well, folks, it was a great old series. It took six games to decide the baseball championship of the world. For four days the Giants and Yanks played a see-saw game, winning a game and then letting the other win. Then the Yanks got tired of the ping-pong stuff and grabbed off Sunday's and Monday's games without letting the National Leaguers get a chance.

Yesterday's game was about the closest and most thrilling of the entire series. The Yanks got the lead in the first inning by Babe Ruth's homer. In their half of the initial frame Giants also scored one. The Yanks seemed to be all played out, while the Giants piled up runs until they had a 4 to 1 lead in the eighth inning. In that frame the Yankees seemed to come to life. Eeither that or else the Giants went to sleep—and never woke up. Five runs came across that inning, and the Yanks grabbed the lead. McGraw yanked Nehf out of the box and put in Ryan, but even that was unable to stop the Yanks.

The game surely assumed the proportions of a managers' battle. McGraw and Huggins pitted brains against each other and the latter won. The strategy came in shifting the line-ups, putting in pinch hitters and working things in the most favorable way. In the eighth inning things became so involved that the game had to be halted to determine the proper Yank batting order.

Even Casey Stengel was unable to turn the trick and win. McGraw must have felt like the Huns felt when they heard the old ballard entitled "The Yanks are Coming."

There is no doubt that the Yanks outplayed the Giants all the way. The only two wins of the Nationals can be credited to one man—Casey Stengel. His home-runs won the two games the Giants copped. And the bases were empty both times at that, each game being won by the narrow margin of one run. On the other hand the Yanks played fairly consistent ball, and fielded in good shape. Their hurling staff did fine work. It can be said in all truth that the best team won.

REAL SLUGGING

There surely was some slugging in the series. Ten home runs, seven triples, and ten doubles are the sum total of the extra base clouts in the six games. Babe Ruth got the honors with three homers, a double and a triple. Two of his homers came in one game. Casey Stengel came next with two home runs, a clout for a double and another for a triple. Dugan, Ward, Young and Irish Meusel came in for the other circuit swats with one each.

WORLD'S SERIES RECEIPTS TOTAL OVER A MILLION

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Official figures of the World series between the Giants and Yankees show that for the first time in history it was a million dollar series. Following are the figures:

Total attendance—301,430.
Total receipts—$1,063,850.
Players' share—$635,459.72.
Clubs' share—$535,459.72.
Advisory council's share—$175,572,35.

GLENDALE, SAN DIEGO PAIRED FOR FIRST DEBATE

Glendale is being paired with San Diego for the first debate in the Southern California League which will take place some time in November. Glendale will be the home team and will submit the question. The debaters will be chosen by open trials, Glendale High not having picked a team yet. It is hoped the debates will be held simultaneously, says Miss Corry, debating coach.

GIRL'S TENNIS TOURNAMENT ON AT HIGH SCHOOL

Interest in girls' tennis has been raised to a higher pitch than ever before in Glendale High School. Starting Monday, and continuing throughout the month, matches will be played off in the big annual tournament. After the finals have been played, and the championship awarded, the best five will be selected to join the Girls' Tennis club. Competitive spirit has been aroused, and each girl is out to win for herself a name in tennis and a place on the tennis club roll of membership. The five chosen will, in all probability, be encouraging material for future use in the league games.

Those lined up for the tournament try-outs which started Monday are: Helen Anderson, Lois Osborne, Virginia Clarke, Eugenia Henry, Barbara Kranz, Louise Emery, Ruth McAbe, Junt Bodkin, Ruth Vogil, Dorothy Forbes, Lois Wardel and Mildred Brockway.

Every year the five best girl racket wielders are chosen for membership in the tennis club.

STANFORD ELEVEN GOES LIKE A MILLION

Cardinals Will Beat U. S. C. This Year, Say Northern Scribes

By HARRY M. BENNETT
Glendale Press Correspondent

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 16.—This part of the country has lost all interest in the U. S. C. team. Two weeks ago the Trojan-Calif. game was the talk of the day. Now all California talks about is the Bruin-Stanford game. The old fight has been renewed at Stanford. It is an entirely new, though far from green crew that will beat U. S. C. this year.

The Cards are in excellent shape. Their 55 to 6 victory over Santa Clara Saturday proved that. Cuddeback is on the job again, along with Jim Lawson. Murray is playing a stellar game at half. Cleaveland is making the other half and displaying some real stuff. Scotch is perfect at quarter and is knocking sport dope for a row with his broken field runs and snagging of passes. Nevers is the snappy little frosh end of last year remodelled into a real fullback.

This may sound like the old stuff but remember that U. S. C. did not beat Stanford so badly last year and the Stanford team this year compares to the Cards of '22 as Yale would look alongside the Glendale high school lightweights. Five of last year's bench warmers, two former frosh and the rest of the '22 squad have been converted into a perfect running machine.

Energetic scribes in this neck of the woods feel it their duty to prepare Southern California for the shock it will receive October 27, when U. S. C. meets Stanford.

During a temporary cessation of hostilities between the opposing forces a tall, strapping Yankee rode into the Confederate camp on a sorry looking old horse to effect a trade for some tobacco. "Hullo, Yank," hailed one of a number of Confederate soldiers lolling about on the grass in front of a tent. "That's a right smart horse you all got there." "Think so?" returned the Yank. "Yes; what'll you take for him?" "Oh, I don't know." "Well, I'll give you $700 for him," bantered the Confederate. "You go to blazes!" returned the Yank. "I've just paid $10,000 of your money to have him curried."

JIMMY MURPHY GETS POINTS RESTORED

A. A. A. Restores 1070 Championship Points to L. A. Racing Driver

By unanimous vote, members of the national contest board, American Automobile Association, yesterday in New York decided to restore to Jimmy Murphy his 1070 championship points. These had been automatically forfeited by the little 1922 speedway champion when, prior to the Labor Day event at Altoona, he sailed for Italy to compete in the 1923 Grand Prix.

News of the contest board's action was received yesterday by A. M. Young, secretary-manager of the Los Angeles Speedway Association, in a wire from Joseph Mack, chairman.

Restoration of the points was made after all the contending drivers who might have been benefited by the taking away of Murphy's points toward the 1923 belt had requested in writing that they be restored to him. Mr. Young and other speedway managers made similar requests.

As a result of yesterday's action of the Three A board, Murphy, just back from Europe, will enter next Thursday's classic at Kansas City still second in the year's race, instead of being last. Eddie Hearne is now leading with 1326 points.

"This move of the board will mean good news to friends of the Los Angeles racing driver," Mr. Young said yesterday, "for it may mean that with good luck at Kansas City Murphy will go into the Thanksgiving day race here at Beverly with a fighting chance for copping the annual championship twice in succession."

BOXING OPENS TONIGHT WITH A GREAT CARD

Five Red Hot Bouts Slated for First Event of Local Season

"There will be a hot time in the old town tonight," when the boxing bouts staged by the Glendale Athletic club get under way. At 8:30 this evening in Hahn's auditorium, 109 North Brand boulevard, the local boxing season will be opened with a bang. Five events, every one of them a real scrap, are on the card, in addition to some added features being provided by Les Marston, who is managing the bouts.

Jim Byrd and McLaughlin will meet in the main event. They are both in good condition and promise a great match. Berry and Ward clash in the semi-finals. Williams meets an unknown opponent, substituted for Essick, who is ill at the present time. Racer and Chino, Salos and Garcia, and Carr and Payo will mix in the preliminary events.

Jim Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, will be present, as will John Hackenschmidt, who grappled to a draw with Bull Montana in their recent match here. A tramp singer crossing the continent will put on some novelty stuff, while the postoffice band will furnish some real music.

A feature of the evening will be the introduction of two women boxers who will be on the card next week. They are said to be the genuine stuff as fighters by those who have seen them in action. Johnny Myers of the local fire department will also be on next week's card.

Tickets for the event are $1, reserved $1.50, and can be secured at the door. The complete card for tonight is as follows:

Main bout—Byrd (Glendale) vs. McLaughlin (Burbank).
Semi-finals—Berry (Glendale) vs. Ward (Lankershim) 130 lbs.
Williams (Lankershim) vs. unknown opponent, 120 lbs.
Racer vs. China, 128 lbs.
Salos vs. Garcia, 115 lbs.
Carr vs. Payo, 108 lbs.

REV. COLE TALKS REVERENTLY OF 'THE OLD BOOK'

Rev. Cole's morning sermon Sunday last at Central Christian church was on the theme "The Old Book—A Tour of the Centuries." It was a study of the Bible, the old book that is ever new, the book that enables us to pierce the almost limitless years that have come and gone since time was declared to begin, that old book the account of the origin of man in which has never been successfully refuted.

Said the speaker further: "It is the only sacred history of God and His original dealings with His creation."

"In Genesis, which means origin or beginning, God says He 'formed man out of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul.' And He makes no apology in the matter. His way should satisfy you and me. I could think of nothing better to make the first man of, could you? I like it better than to think He might have evolved him out of a miserable, long-tailed, idiotic, chattering monkey."

And so a brief resume was given of the principal books of the old testament and then of the four gospels, which tell the brief life story of the only perfect man, who came on earth to die that the world might be saved from sin.

"Now there remain 23 books," continued the speaker. "One of these tells us, by citing many instances of conversion, how to get into Christ and the 21 that follow it, the epistles, tell us how to stay in. The ten cases of conversion related all agree exactly in the manner of procedure.

"Then there is one more book, Revelation, which is a prophecy of the defeats and triumphs of the church and a picture of the New Jerusalem. It is a marvelous book, the duplicate of God's mind, a transcript of His judgment. Like a mighty arch it spans the years of history and rests its last abutment amid the paradise of the redeemed. But standing today in its midst as its life giver and inspiration is the Lamb of God, with His wounded hands reaching far out over the battlements of the city of God, in this direction. In a voice so tender and sweet I hear Him say: 'Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest.'"

At the evening service 50 colored slides depicting the shepherd life of ancient Palestine and marking the career of David, were shown, followed by a short sermon on this "man after God's own heart," by the pastor.

"THE SPIRIT OF THE CHURCH" IS REV. KRINGEL'S THEME

Rev. O. Kringel delivered a sermon Sunday morning at the services of the Zion Lutheran congregation on the theme "The Spirit of the Church". It was based on the Acts 14:26-28. A good audience was present.

The speaker said in part: "Saul is on the highway to Damascus, a bitter enemy of Christ and the Christians, he breathes out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord. Suddenly a heavenly light envelops him; he hears a voice saying, 'Saul, Saul, why persecute thou Me?' 'Who art thou, Lord?' he asks. The Lord answers, 'I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest.' In a tremulous voice Saul inquires, 'Lord, what wilt Thou have me do?' In a tone of mercy Saul becomes a Christian, an ardent follower of Christ. As his body and soul have now been conecrated to the cause of Christ, he is ready to do unflinchingly the Lord's bidding. And what did the Lord tell him to do? He commands him to bear His name to the Gentiles, kings and the children of Israel.

"Lord what wilt Thou have me to do?" This is the sentiment and spirit of the church, that is, of every individual believer in Christ. We are His; our life is consecrated to His cause.

Our text tells us of Paul and his co-workers, which the church had sent to the Gentiles. It relates the cheerful news brought home by these missionaries and foreshadows a renewed zeal to prosecute the work on even larger lines. The missionary spirit of the church at Antioch is a mighty incentive for us. She sends out missionaries to preach the glad tidings of salvation and so should we. She is filled with renewed zeal for ever greater missionary activities, and so should we.

"Our text relates how Paul and Barnabas went out into the heathen lands of Asia Minor. They were equipped with the Gospel of salvation of the crucified and risen Christ. Our missionaries also go wherever God calls them through the church—to China, to India, to South America, leaving home, and friends. They cheerfully preach unto the people the forgiveness of their sins through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

"In view of the fact that the end of all things is at hand, when, as we see, the world is religiously bankrupt, when daily we hear the sneer of Pilate, 'What is truth?' let us proclaim unto the world the name of Messiah, that through faith in Him they are to be saved. God has called the church to work in a large harvest field. Not only are there millions of people in heathen lands boring down to wood and stone, but in our own country millions are in need of the pure Gospel. May God grant us true faith, sincere love, and a holy missionary zeal."

BIBLE, SCIENCE, DO NOT CONFLICT, SAYS BROOKS

Keith L. Brooks began a series of Bible lectures on the opening chapters of the book of Genesis. He declared that perfect harmony would be found between the plain statements of the original scriptures, and all assured facts of geology, that Christianity needs to be saved from some of the interpretations which theologians have given these chapters in their efforts to reconcile Genesis with the everchanging theories of scientists.

Among other thins he said: "You have heard much about Genesis in the light of modern thought. I wish to approch it from the opposite standpoint and talk to you about modern thought in the light of Genesis.

In the beginning, (the former times) God created heavens (universe) and the earth. The word for created here means to "bring into existence out of nothing." There are some things in Genesis that are said to have been created while others are said to have been made; two entirely different Hebrew words being used. This earth in the beginning was not molded out of material in confused mass, but was created perfect.

The second verse states the next event. Something happened to this earth. Verse two describes a subsequent distinct event which had to do with this earth, but not the rest of the universe. Our translation says "the earth was waste and void", but some of the best Hebrew scholars translate it, "the earth became desolate and empty". We have the same construction exactly in Genesis 19:26 where we are told that Lot's wife became a pillar of salt. We have positive proof that the earth as originally created in the dateless past was not created in a state of desolation but came perfect from the hand of God. Isaiah 45:18 tells us that "He created it not in desolation". As animals and human beings were placed upon the earth we are told that God directed that they should multiply and replenish the earth. The word "replenish" means "to fill up again". The earth, therefore, must have been previously inhabited by some kind of beings.

This earth everywhere bears the marks of some terrific cataclysm in past ages. Geologists find buried deep in the crust of the earth the fossil remains of huge animals that were caught in tremendous upheavals. These fossil animals seem to have nothing to do with our present order of creation and evidently belong to a former order. Man is not found in fossil state, and greater antiquity for man than allowed by the Bible can not be established. An indefinite period of perhaps millions of years lies between verse one and verse three where God begins the story of how the earth was refashioned to become the habitation of man. There is plenty of room for all the geological ages before we take up the story of the creation of man, whose history according to the Bible dates back little more than 6000 years.

"BRINGING BACK THE KING" THEME OF REV. EDMONDS

Rev. W. E. Edmonds delivered a powerful sermon on "Bringing Back the King" to a large congregation at the Presbyterian services held in the Glendale Theatre Sunday morning. His text was from II Samuel 19:10.

He told his hearers that no government will be lasting except the kingdom which will be set up by the King of Kings. The Lord Jesus Christ is in exile today. He was rejected by His own to whom He came, crucified by Roman power at the instigation of His own people. God raised Him from the dead, and He sent forth His disciples as ambassadors, summoning all hearts who are willing to receive Him as their King to submit to His authority, and accept the Gospel of His grace.

I. Who is this King? The documents are on file, clear and unmistakably plain, and can be read in the geneaological tables in Matthew and Luke. He is the King of Israel, but through riches of grace there is neither Jew nor Gentile. Jesus Christ is the only living heir to David's throne. The angel said to Mary: "He shall sit upon the throne of His father David and of His kingdom there shall be no end."

II. Why should we want to bring back the King? Because of the failures of all earthly kings, and because the world continues to reject Jesus Christ, the King of Kings. The majority in the world today refuse to lay down their weapons of rebellion. They are enemies of the Cross of Christ. We want Him to come back because His coming will bring an end to death, sorrow, sin, and Satan.

III. How may we bring Him back? He says: "Be ye also ready—behold, I come quickly" (swiftly). We may help to bring Him back by longing, desiring and praying that the King of Glory shall come quickly; by our consecration, daily walk, and definite purpose in soul winning.

This is the vital question: Is He your King? Are you one of His loyal subjects? Are you obedient to His commands?

TWENTIETH INSTALLMENT

The house rose at her as she came down to the front; and she bowed again to right and left, and put her hand to her heart quite simply and with a most winning natural gesture, an adorable gaucherie—like a graceful and unconscious school-girl, quite innocent of stage deportment.

It was Trilby!

Trilby the tone-deaf, who couldn't sing one single note in tune! Trilby, who couldn't tell a C from an F!!

What was going to happen!

Our three friends were almost turned to stone in the immensity of their surprise.

Yet the big Taffy was trembling all over; the Laird's jaw had all but fallen on to his chest; Little Billee was staring, staring his eyes almost out of his head. There was something, to them, so strange and uncanny about it all; so oppressive, so anxious, so momentous!

The applause had at last subsided. Trilby stood with her hands behind her, one foot (the left one) on a little stool that had been left there on purpose, her lips parted, her eyes on Svengali's, ready to begin.

He gave his three beats, and the band struck a chord. Then, at another beat from him, but in her direction, she began, without the slightest appearance of effort, without any accompaniment whatever, he still beating time—conducting her, in fact, just as if she had been an orchestra herself:

"Au clair dela lune,
Mon ami Pierrot!
Prete-moi ta plume
Pour ecrie un mot.
Ma chandle est morte . . .
Je n'ai plus de feu!
Ouvre-moi ta porte
Pour l'amour de Dieu!"

This was the absurd old nursery rhyme with which la Svengali chose to make her debut before the most critical audience in the world! She sang it three times over—the same verse. There is but one.

The first time she sang it without any expression whatever—not the slightest. Just the words and the tune; in the middle of her voice, and not loud at all; just as a child sings who is thinking of something else; or just as a young French mother sings who is darning socks by a cradle, and rocking her baby to sleep with her foot.

But her voice was so immense in its softness, richness, freshness, that it seemed to be pouring itself out from all round; its intonation absolutely, mathematically pure; one felt it to be not only faultless, but infallible; and the seduction, the novelty of it, the strangely sympathetic quality! How can one describe the quality of a peach or a nectarine to those who have only known apples?

Until la Svengali appeared, the world had only known apples—Catalanis, Jenny Linds, Grisis, Albonis, Pattis! The best apples that can be, for sure—but still only apples!

If she had spread a pair of large white wings and gracefully fluttered up to the roof and perched upon the chandelier, she could not have produced a greater sensation. The like of that voice has never been heard, nor ever will be again. A woman archangel might sing like that, or some enchanted princess out of a fairy-tale.

Little Billee had already dropped his face into his hands and hid his eyes in his pocket-handkerchief; a big tear had fallen on to Taffy's left whisker; the Laird was trying hard to keep his tears back.

She sang the verse a second time, with but little added expression and no louder; but with a sort of breathy widening of her voice that made it like a broad heavenly smile of universal motherhood turned into sound. One felt all the genial gayety and grace and impishness of Pierrot and Columbine idealized into frolicsome beauty and holy innocence, as though they were performing for the saints in Paradise—a baby Columbine, with a cherub for clown! The dream of it all came over you for a second or two—a revelation of some impossible golden age—priceless—never to be forgotten! How on earth did she do it?

Little Billee had lost all control over himself, and was shaking with his suppressed sobs—Little Billee, who hadn't shed a single tear for five long years! Half the people in the house were in tears, but tears of sheer delight, of delicate inner laughter.

Then she came back to earth, and saddened and veiled and darkened her voice as she sang the verse for the third time; and it was a great and sombre tragedy, too deep for any more tears; and somehow or other poor Columbine, forlorn and betrayed and dying, out in the cold at midnight—sinking down to hell, perhaps—was making her last frantic appeal! It was no longer Pierrot and Columbine—it was Marguerite—it was Faust! It was the most terrible and pathetic of all possible human tragedies, but expressed with no dramatic or histrionic exaggeration of any sort; by mere tone, slight, subtle changes in the quality of the sound—too quick and elusive to be taken count of, but to be felt with, oh, what poignant sympathy!

When the song was over the applause did not come immediately, and she waited with her kind wide smile, as if she were well accustomed to wait like this; and then the storm began, and grew and spread and rattled and echoed—voice, hands, feet, sticks, umbrellas!—and down came the bouquets, which the little page-boys picked up; and Trilby bowed to front and right and left in her simple debonnaire fashion. It was her usual triumph. It had never failed, whatever the audience, whatever the country, whatever the song.

Little Billee didn't applaud. He sat with his head in his hands, his shoulders still heaving. He believed himself to be fast asleep and in a dream, and was trying his utmost not to wake; for a great happiness was his. It was one of those nights to be marked with a white stone!

As the first bars of the song came pouring out of her parted lips (whose shape he so well remembered), and her dovelike eyes looked straight over Svengali's head, straight in his own direction nay, at him—something melted in his brain, and all his long-lost power of loving came back with a rush.

It was like the sudden curing of a deafness that has been lasting for years. The doctor blows through your nose into your Eustachian tube with a little India-rubber machine; some obstacle gives way, there is a snap in your head, and straightway you hear better than you had ever heard in all your life, almost too well; and all your life is once more changed for you!

At length he sat up again, in the middle of la Svengali's singing of the "Nussbaum," and saw her; and saw the Laird sitting by him, and Taffy, their eyes riveted on Trilby, and knew for certain that it was no dream this time, and his joy was almost a pain!

She sang the "Nusbaum" (to its heavenly accompaniment) as simply as she had sung the previous song. Every separate note was a highly finished gem of sound, linked to the next by a magic bond. You did not require to be a lover of music to fall beneath the spell of such a voice as that; the mere melodic phrase had all but ceased to matter. Her phrasing, consummate as it was, was as simple as a child's.

After this, when the long, frantic applause had subsided, she made a gracious bow to the royal British opera-glass (which had never left her face), and sang "Ben Bolt" in English!

And then Little Billee remembered there was such a person as Svengali in the world, and recalled his little flexible flageolet!

"That is how I teach Gecko; that is how I teach la bedite Honorine; that is how I teach il bel canto. . . . It was lost, il bel canto—and I found it in a dream—I, Svengali!"

And his old cosmic vision of the beauty and sadness of things, the very heart of them, and their pathetic evanescence, came back with a tenfold clearness—that heavenly glimpse beyond the veil! And with it a crushing sense of his own infinitesimal significance by the side of this glorious pair of artists, one of whom had been his friend and the other his love—a love who had offered to be his humble mistress and slave, not feeling herself good enough to be his wife!

It made him sick and faint to remember, and filled him with hot shame, and then and there his love for Trilby became as that of a dog for its master!

She sang once more—"Chanson de Printemps," by Gounod (who was present, and seemed very hysterical), and the first part of the concert was over, and people had time to draw breath and talk over this new wonder, this revelation of what the human voice could achieve; and an immense hum filled the hall—astonishment, enthusiasm, ecstatic delight!

But our three friends found little to say—for what they felt there were as yet no words!

Taffy and the Laird looked at Little Billee, who seemed to be looking inward at some transcendant dream of his own; with red eyes, and his face all pale and drawn, and his nose very pink, and rather thicker than usual; and the dream appeared to be out of the common blissful, though his eyes were swimming still, for his smile was almost idiotic in its rapture!

The second part of the concert was still shorter than the first, and created, if possible, a wilder enthusiasm.

Trilby only sang twice.

Her first song was "Malbrouck's s'en va-t'en guerre."

She began it quite lightly and merrily, like a jolly march; in the middle of her voice, which had not as yet revealed any exceptional compass or range.

But now, quite suddenly, without a single modulation or note of warning, down goes the tune a full major third, from E to C—into the graver depths of Trilby's great contralto—so solemn and ominous that there is no more weeping, but the flesh creeps! the accompaniment slows and elaborates itself; the march becomes a funeral march, with muted strings, and quite slowly:

"Aux nouvelles que j'apporte—
Mironton, mironton, mirontaine!
Aux nouvelles que j'apporte,
Vos beaux yeux vont pleurer!"

Here the ding-donging of a big bell seems to mingle with the score; . . . and very slowly, and so impressively that the news will ring forever in the ears and hearts of those who hear it from la Svengali's lips:

'Le Sieur Malbrouck est mort—
Mironton, mironton, mirontaine!
Le Sieur—Malbrouck—est—mort!
Est mort—et enterre!"

And thus it ends quite abruptly!

And this heart-rending tragedy, this great historical epic in two dozen lines, at which some five or six thousand gay French people are sniffling and mopping their eyes like so many Niobes, is just a common old French comic song—a mere nursery ditty, like "Little Bo-peep"—to the tune,

"We won't go home till morning.
Till daylight doth appear."

And after a second or two of silence (oppressive and impressive as that which occurs at a burial when the handful of earth is being dropped on the coffin-lid) the audience bursts once more into madness; and la Svengali, who accepts no encores, has to bow for nearly five minutes, standing amid a sea of flowers. . . .

Then comes her great and final performance. The orchestra swiftly plays the first four bars of the bass in Chopin's Impromptu (A flat); and suddenly, without words, as a light nymph catching the whirl of a double skipping-rope, la Svengali breaks in, and vocalizes that astounding piece of music that so few pianists can even play; but no pianist has ever played it like this; no piano has ever given out such notes as these!

Every single phrase is a string of perfect gems, of purest ray serene, strung together on a loose golden thread! The higher and shriller she sings, the sweeter it is; higher and shriller than any woman had ever sung before.

Waves of sweet and tender laughter, the very heart and essence of innocent, high-spirited girlhood, alive to all that is simple and joyous and elementary in nature—the freshness of the morning, the ripple of the stream, the click of the mill, the lisp of wind in the trees, the song of the lark in the cloudless sky—the sun and the dew, the scent of early flowers and summer woods and meadows—the sight of birds and bees and butterflies and frolicsome young animals at play—all the sights and scents and sounds that are the birthright of happy children, happy savages in favored climes—things within the remembrance and the reach of most of us! All this, the memory and the feel of it, are in Trilby's voice as she warbles that long, smooth, lilting, dancing laugh, that wondrous song without words; and those who hear feel it all, and remember it with her. It is irresistible; it forces itself on you; no words, no pictures, could ever do the like! So that the tears that are shed out of all these many French eyes are tears of pure, unmixed delight in happy reminiscence! (Chopin, it is true, may have meant something quite different—a hot-house, perhaps, with orchids and arum lilies and tuberoses and hydrangeas—but that is neither here nor there.)

Then comes the slow movement, the sudden adagio, with its capricious ornaments—the waking of the virgin heart, the stirring of the sap, the dawn of love; its doubts and fears and questionings; and the mellow, powerful, deep chest notes are like the pealing of great golden bells, with a light little pearl shower tinkling round—drops from the upper fringe of her grand voice as she shakes it. . . .

Then back again the quick part, childhood once more, da capo, only quicker! hurry, hurry! but distinct as ever. Loud and shrill and sweet beyond compare—drowning the orchestra; of a piercing quality quite ineffable; a joy there is no telling; a clear, purling, crystal stream that gurgles and foams and bubbles along over sunlit stones; "a wonder, a world's delight!"

And there is not a sign of effort, of difficulty overcome. All through. Trilby smiles her broad, angelic smile; her lips well parted, her big white teeth glistening as she gently jerks her head from side to side in time to Svengali's baton, as if to shake the willing notes out quicker and higher and shriller. . . .

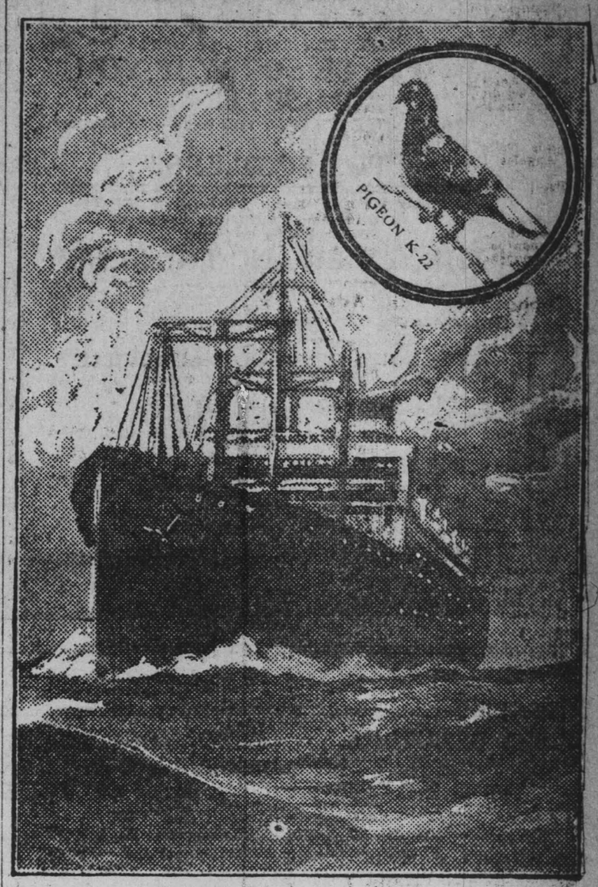
"Carrier Pigeon Seeking Refuge On Liner Brings Luck To Passengers.



S. S. President Garfield

New York, Since the days of Noah the pigeon has been universally considered a bird of good omen. After the pigeon's first cousin, the dove, was released from the Ark during the latter days of the flood, and came back with the olive branch indicating that land was nearby, these birds have been regarded as emblems of hope.

The legends of practically every race in the world are full of some reference to pigeons, bolstering up this belief in their qualities as good luck bearers. So strong is this superstition imprinted in the minds of men that in various of the leading cities of the world flocks of pigeons eat and strut about public squares unmolested.

Passengers on the S. S. President Garfield of the United States Lines a few weeks ago were given a practical demonstration of the good luck bringing qualities of the pigeon. Bound from London to New York, the President Garfield was about 1,200 miles off the English coast when a carrier pigeon, which had been hovering over the vessel, became exhausted and dropped into the lap of a woman passenger who was sitting on the boat deck.

The woman, Mrs. Edith Sneooks, of London, examined the exhausted bird and found on the tag attached to one of its legs the identification mark "K 22, Norfolk, England." According to officers on the President Garfield, this is the insignia of pigeons used in the British Army carrier service, and it is believed that the bird, released during the training season, had in some way gotten off its course and started across the Atlantic, keeping up its flying until exhausted, when it had chosen the United States liner as a landing place.

The President Garfield's carpenter made a handsome wicker cage for the pigeon, which, under treatment prescribed by the ship's butcher, official steward to birds and animals aboard speedily recovered its strength. The arrival on board of the pigeon revived stories of the good luck these birds are supposed to bring, both among the passengers and crew, and until the President Garfield arrived in port, many were the yarns swapped concerning these legends.

When the President Garfield reached her pier in New York, it looked, however, as if this particular pigeon was not running true to form, as a bringer of luck, for the immigration officials told Mrs. Sneooks, who is not an American citizen, that as the British quota for the month had been filled she could not land. Though not exactly blaming this misfortune on the carrier pigeon, Mrs. Sneooks was not at all pleased at the prospect of having to return to England without seeing her brother, a resident of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Not knowing how she could enter the country after the British quota was exceeded, Mrs Sneooks decided she would have to return to England. It was then that the pigeon started again in its good work. Newspaper men, keen on the scent of an unusual story, heard of the pigeon flying aboard, and were taken to Mrs Sneooks for full details concerning it. While obtaining their story, the newspaper men learned from the Englishwoman that the immigration authorities had told her she could not land. They asked her how long she intended to be here, and learned something that the immigration officers had not: that Mrs Sneooks only intended to visit her brother for four months and did not intend taking up her residence here.

This put an entirely different face on the situation, for as a visitor Mrs Sneooks could come in, though the quota was filled, while she could not come in as a permanent resident.

Aiding the woman, as is always their custom, the ship news reporters took Mrs. Sneooks back before the immigration officers. They explained to them that she was but a visitor, and that was therefore entitled to land. The officials recognized the justice of the woman's claim as newly presented and a landing ticket was issued her.

Thinking over the matter, Mrs Sneooks decided that the carrier pigeon was the direct cause of her not being sent back to London, for only through it had her case been again called to the attention of the immigration men. She declared, therefore, that Mr. Pigeon would travel with her to Fort Wayne and back home to England after her visit.

Accordingly, when she left the President Garfield on the first leg of her land journey to her brother's home, Mrs. Sneooks carried the cage containing the carrier pigeon.

AT THE THEATRES

VERY BEAUTIFUL IS "WHITE ROSE" AT THE GATEWAY

For three weeks D. W. Griffith filmed strikingly quaint pastoral scenes along the Bayou Teche in Western Louisiana for his newest picture, "The White Rose," now playing at the Gateway Theater, and then went to Miami, Florida, where he finished the picture. Mr. Griffith had with him Mae Marsh, Carol Dempster, Ivor Novello, Neil Hamilton, Lucille La Verne, Porter Strong and other players.

"The White Rose" is a typical story of the old south and it was with no little difficulty that the producer was able to find scenes suited to it. The love of the people of the Teche country to preserve and maintain old traditions in life and architecture was of great benefit to Mr. Griffith who found in Western Louisiana the sort of settings he was in need of. There are to be found homes which have stood unmolested by the touch of modernism for a hundred years.

The descendants of the old Acadians who settled in the Teche country when driven out of Nova Scotia by the British in 1755 are keen about continuing in the ways of their forefathers and they gained added inspiration when Longfellow immortalized the Teche land by having "Evangeline" and "Gabriel" pass unseen along that stream.

ROBIN HOOD MORE CHIVALROUS THAN MAN OF TODAY

The fact that Douglas Fairbanks' super?photodrama, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" reflects the spirit of chivalry at its zenith in the Twelfth Century is the cause of a wide discussion as to a comparison of present-day chivalry with that obtaining in the balmy days of knighthood 800 years ago. It has been contended that all the proof one needs of the lack of the slightest semblance of a remaining chivalry among modern men can be had on almost any street car almost any day in almost any American city.

An authority on the history of the Twelfth Century declares a similar demonstration of impoliteness would have caused mortal combat, since no true exponent of the kind of chivalry 800 years ago in England would have hesitated to show full resentment.

According to the impression of the spirit of the memorable age given by Mr. Fairbanks in "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," now showing at the Glendale Theater, the men fought with reckless abandon that ladies fair might be duly honored and it seems exceedingly certain no woman would have had to cling to a strap while men held down comfortable seats—if there had been street cars in those days.

However, another debater with a penchant for defending modern man, offers the suggestion that women have changed since then, too.

TRUE PICTURE OF ALASKA GOLD RUSH IN 'THE SPOILERS'

"The prime requisite of any great motion picture is a great setting. Great books, great paintings, great songs, are inspired by great events," declared Jesse D. Hampton, motion picture producer, in explaining why he chose as a photoplay theme, Rex Beach's novel, "The Spoilers," which is showing for the last times today at the T., D. & L. Theater.

"The Klondike gold rush," Mr. Hampton went on, "was one of the greatest events in American history. It developed a section of the United States hitherto almost forgotten. It developed powerful figures and produced untold fortunes. Thus it is logical that the event should bring forth one of the most powerful stories in American literature, 'The Spoilers.'

"Rex Beach's novel is one of the best written in recent years. It is based on an historical incident and it portrays as does no other work, the great Alaskan gold rush. Furthermore it did more than any other thing to stop the political 'spoilers' from wrestling the rich gold mines from their rightful owners."

Dr. Abernethy, the famous surgeon, was a man of few words, but he once met his match—in a woman. She called at his surgery in Edinburgh and showed him a hand badly inflamed and swollen. The following dialogue, opened by the doctor, took place:

"Burn?"
"Bruise."
"Poultice."

The next day the woman called again, and the dialogue was as follows:

"Better?"
"More poultice."

Two days later the woman made another call, and this conversation occurred:

"Better?"
"Well. Fee?"
"Nothing," exclaimed the doctor. "Most sensible woman I ever met."

A boy whose father had always been a great stickler for etiquette was sent to a distant boarding school. Upon his departure the father instructed the son to telegraph home "Yes," if he found everything satisfactory.

He did so. But the busy parent had forgotten the arrangement, and, being puzzled, telegraphed back: "Yes, what?"

Graft and Grafters Date Back a Long Way

Graft and grafters date back a long way and seem inseparable from human effort. Old records which have been found in Jerusalem tell of a water system built in the days of Roman occupation. Pontius Pilate was in charge of the job. Interesting (because "grafting" is not unknown today), is the fact that among other offenses attributed to Pontius Pilate was that of misusing the water system funds.

But Pilate's grafting is not the important thing. The fact is interesting that there was some effort made to improve sanitary conditions by providing a water system. It is also worth noting that civilization made progress almost parallel to the consideration given to sanitation, down through the ages.

The United States Bureau of Public Health reports that the health of the nation has been improved more than five per cent during the last decade. Typhoid, malaria and other fevers that used to claim hundreds of victims yearly are now very effectively controled. Public and domestic sanitation has been the largest factor in helping to control them.

The modern plumber, with his knowledge of sewage disposal and his skill in putting running water in our homes and business buildings, is indeed performing a valuable service—one that is too often neglected in our considerations.

PERIL IN HOME ELECTRICAL DEVICES

Man-made electricity kills twice as many persons in the United States each year as do all the lightning bolts that flash from the sky, writes George M. Ogle, electrical engineer, advising that the following precautions be taken when operating electrical apparatus:

Use only one hand in switching electric lights on or off, and keep the other hand free from metallic contact.

Never switch an electric light with one hand while the other hand is in the water or on a water faucet.

Never operate an electric light while standing in a bathtub.

Always be sure that the hands are dry when operating electrical devices.

Never tamper with electrical circuits with which you are not familiar.
